Florida Has One of the Lowest Covid Death Rates in the Country

Florida now has one of the lowest case rates for Covid-19 in the country despite having no mask or vaccine mandates.

In the recent Covid-19 surge Florida was recording 101 cases per 100,000 people and only 1.77 new deaths per 100,000.

Since mid-September, Florida is only recording nine cases per 100,000 a day with less than 0.2 deaths per 100,000 according to the CDC.

Governor Ron DeSantis has refused to implement vaccine mandates or mask mandates and has instead focused on early treatment.

Florida previously had the highest seven-day average for cases and the highest hospitalization rate in the U.S.

Now, however, they are doing just as well as California although California has taken a much stricter approach with mask mandates, limited gatherings, and closing bars and indoor dining.

Florida has the best case rate in the country behind California, Mississippi, Hawaii, and Alabama.
