

Keith Olbermann Calls Those are Unvaccinated “Snowflakes”

In a recent social media post, Keith Olbermann called out those who are unvaccinated, calling them “snowflakes” and “scared”. Snowflakes is generally a term used by conservatives to describe “soft”, or “weak” liberals.

Ironically, Olbermann is using this language to insult conservatives when in reality, in his home New York City, 72% of young black people remain unvaccinated.

In addition to young black people, many other groups of people remain hesitant to get the vaccine, including nurses.

People in power continue to try to pit the vaccinated against the unvaccinated as people, both vaccinated and unvaccinated individuals continue to suffer from the effects of Covid-19.

Instead of shaming those who are unvaccinated, it may be time to consider why there are still so many people out there who are hesitant or unwilling to get vaccinated.

The Jimmy Dore video below shares clips of Olbermann’s recent social media post, along with additional (hilarious) commentary.
